PRINCE WILLIAM SOUND
SUBSISTENCE GOLDEN KING AND TANNER CRAB
SEASONS OPEN

The Prince William Sound (PWS) Area subsistence golden king crab and Tanner crab seasons open October 1 and continue through March 31. These fisheries are open only to Alaska residents. Prior to fishing an individual must obtain a 2012/13 PWS subsistence crab fishing permit. Permits will be issued on a household basis and will be available September 17 at ADF&G offices in Cordova, Homer, Soldotna, and Anchorage, by prior appointment from the Alaska Department of Public Safety/Alaska Wildlife Troopers in Valdez (835-4307) and through the Fish House in Seward. Each fisherman must possess a permit or be named on the permit of another household member. The permit must be in possession of the person fishing and the permit catch report must be completed immediately following pot retrieval.

Gear is limited to two pots per person with no more than two pots per vessel. Each pot must have two escape rings with an inside diameter of $4\frac{3}{8}$ inches, meet biodegradable escape mechanism requirements (5 AAC 39.145), and may not have any line floating on the surface except that portion connecting the main buoy to a trailer buoy.

The Tanner crab bag and possession limits are five legal size ($5\frac{1}{2}$ inches or greater in carapace width) male Tanner crab per person and per day. Waters closed to subsistence crab fishing within PWS include, Port Valdez, Galena Bay, Port Fidalgo and Port Gravina (Figure 1).

Only male golden king crab 7 inches or greater in carapace width may be retained and these may be harvested only from PWS waters west of $147^{\circ} 20.00'$ W. longitude. There is an annual household limit of 3 golden king crab.
